Wayne Dollack 2 Hour Scenario Game STALINGRAD III

by Don "Badger" Grubish

The trip down there cost us two flat trailer tires and our sponsor, Rick Michel's sanity after two horrible bits of news, plus the news of Chris Berg committing suicide. However, we managed to keep our spirits high, thanks to one team member, Carpenter's, birthday and cameo appearances by "Luckman" and "Sparkles." However, that's another story all together.

That Friday night, September 7, I walked around and tried to meet as many of the other scenario teams as I could, like the Hellions, the Rangers, the Saints, Team Fugazi, and the Wild Bunch boys from the Twin Cities. Thank GOD I got all those teams the next day when the game started.

Wayne Dollack himself couldn't make the event, due to a bus breakdown, but it was fun anyway with "Pipebomb" going on with the show in Wayne's absence. When I got introduced as the Russian general, I received a HUGE cheering for it, unlike the German general, so that made me feel extra specially proud to serve.

The game took scenario paintball to an all-time new high in complexity, but that was fun and very challenging. I sent my teammates on SO many different missions - some of them completed, some of them not. During the night game, I went on one to gain us an additional 400 points, and got bit up like crazy by mosquitoes in the process! At the end of the night, we had 52 Russian players to their, perhaps 15 German players. In essence, we dominated during the night!

However, I have to admit this, but they were using their German spies SO much better than I could utilize mine. I do have to give those guys props for their sneakiness. It's what allowed the Germans to finally win the game on Sunday.

Our tank was the only running tank on the field, as the Rangers couldn't use theirs due to no insurance and no lights on it. It was a shame for our LandShark, as we would love to see it go up against their tank. They practically have the same technology as our electronic turret.

In the end, I was given a very large trophy for my efforts as the Russian general, and it now proudly sits within CC Military Surplus' Maplewood, Minnesota location.

My awards went out to:

a man nicknamed "Scuba" of the Rangers for MVP, who alerted me to a very cunning spy.

Hellions received the Most Valuable Team award, (or MVT), because these fighters never ever gave up on me!

Two guys from Team Fugazi received the Players of Valor award, because they had drive like no other.

Our tank referee got the honor for best field judge, because it takes a lot to keep up with Odin's driving.

And finally Odin "Dwome" Gilbertson won the award for Best Sportsmanship, because he took care of a situation for the twisted ankle incident until medical help arrived.

Thank you to Wayne Dollack for this game, to Pipe Bomb for carrying on in Wayne's absence and keeping the game FUN, to Ray and Paul Dagnino for giving me the opportunity to general and allowing us to stay yet one more night before driving home.

Thank you yet again, Hellions, for sharing your dinner with us! My God, you guys really came through, considering we only got a 2-hour window to eat before we had to get back out on the field for the night game.

Thank you, Rangers, for being on our side, even though you wanted to use your tank. I'd rather lead you than duck from your paint!

Thank you, Team Fugazi, for being the stellar, motivated, dedicated, awesome sons o' beotchies that you are. You guys are my friends!

Thank you, Saints, for being my initial fort guards and keeping Bane and Superman off my back, even though I didn't know they were cunning spies!

Thank you, Wild Bunch, for adding your guns to ours in this crazy game!

BATTLE OF SERENITY VALLEY

I have played the game, I have refereed the game, I have generated in the game, and I have written two books about the game. About the only thing I have yet to do is HOST a game. Therefore, I believe it's high time I crossed that off my list as well.

Announcing on July 19th in 2008, I will now host a scenario paintball event in Hudson, Wisconsin called the Battle of Serenity Valley. For those of you not familiar with my themed game, it is based on the television show Firefly and the movie Serenity. Character generals for this game will be both Captain Malcolm Reynolds of the Browncoats, and "the Operative" for the Alliance. Other character roles will be River Tam, Shepherd Book, Jayne Cobb, and Kaylee, along with a slew of characters for the Alliance side too.

If that weren't enough for the seasoned scenario player/Firefly enthusiast, I will also incorporate the Reavers as a third team set to cause havoc for both teams. This will be a "bring your own paint" event and all proceeds will benefit Minnesota Military Families Foundation, a charity organization dedicated to helping military families throughout Minnesota.

Prizes will include a super-modified Tippmann A-5 called "Vera," as well as many other great prizes from top names in the paintball industry. Already the game looks to be an event not to be missed, so watch for more information on this game, and where you can register you and your team early!

Special Announcement...

After coming back from CPX's hosting of the Wayne Dollack Stalingrad III game in September, I thought long and hard about the possibility of sponsoring another scenario team. However, my troubles became clear when I asked myself the question: who would I sponsor if I did?

My answer quickly came to me when I reviewed who fought the hardest for me in that game. Team Fugazi's name came to the top of that list. Commanded by Jason Brady, this crack squad of elite players embody all aspects of honor, fair play, and dedication that set them above most other teams. If ever there is a group of focused players that can carry my Badger name and books, it's Team Fugazi.

The team is based out of CPX Sports in Joliet, Illinois, and all members are a part of the Tactical Ten Paintball League. The team is as diverse in their abilities as they are in their paintball markers.

This quality gives them an edge in their playing style, since every mission they receive can be as complex and challenging. No matter what the scenario calls for, Team Fugazi is ready for the task.

I am as honored to sponsor them as they are honored to carry my name on their list of promoters. If ever you should be fortunate enough to run alongside them, do yourself a favor and get to know Team Fugazi. Their team name might stand for "F-ed Up, Got Ambushed, Zipped In," but their never-quit attitude will get them out of any situation and on to victory. I salute Team Fugazi!

Reality Check:

Once again, I am proud to announce that my article has been published inside Paintball 2Xtremes magazine! I have written stories for them in the past, and in next month's issue, my article on Splat Tag's Giant Big Game XIII will be featured in the scenario section.

The article centers on the specifics of the game, and gives readers a behind-the-goggles look at one of Wisconsin's oldest running giant games. The owner of the field, Darrin Johnson, happens to be friends with the magazine's editor in chief, John Amodea. Through him, he learned that my article on the game was going to be featured in the coming issue.

If you haven't already subscribed to this magazine, consider doing so. Paintball 2Xtremes magazine has everything the paintball enthusiast demands, and has dedicated itself beyond most other magazines as one of the best sources for scenario paintball.

I am very happy to be associated with this magazine, and hope that you will give a subscription a try. They are very dedicated to bringing you the latest in gear, the best articles on both scenario and speedball news, and up-to-date listings of games going on in your area.

Some of the best action photography can be found in PB2X as well. Stunning photography shows the paint splatters as they happen, great scenario costuming, terrific shots of various fields around the country, and vivid shots of all the action. Do yourself a favor, and subscribe to Paintball 2Xtremes magazine if you have the means. In addition to the Badger Bulletin, this magazine will get your heart pumping for the game like no other publication can! For more information, log on to www.pb2x.com today!
